County Auditors Get
Poor Relief Advice

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 4, (UP)—County auditors were advised today by the governor's commission on unemployment relief that adequate provision for poor relief funds for the coming year must be included in budgets and tax levies for 1937. Under poor relief laws of Indiana, the county is charged with the responsibility of making advancement of funds to the township in payment of poor relief bills as filed by the trustee whenever the township has no relief funds to its credit, it was pointed out. In event there are insufficient county revenue funds, it will be necessary for county commissioners and council to provide such funds by making temporary loans or issuance of poor relief bonds, the communication said. Counties were informed that the works progress administration and the public welfare programs will serve to reduce the number of persons on direct relief. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Church and son Clarke have returned to Chicago after visiting Mr. Church's mother Mrs. H. A. Church.

WILL ERECT
4-H PAVILION
WEDNESDAY

HOPE TO PUT UP BUILDING
DURING AFTERNOON AT CITY PARK

BY VOLUNTEER WORKMEN

Final Preparations Made Today For Erection Of Pavilion. To Be Permanent Structure.

A group of expert carpenters and workmen, under the direction of Arthur Perry, labored all day, Tuesday at Robe-Ann park to have everything in readiness Wednesday when a gang of volunteer carpenters will attempt to erect a pavilion in a single afternoon. The building will house the exhibits of the Putnam county 4-H fair to be held at the park August 13-15.

Tuesday the work consisted in the construction of scaffolding and cutting timber so that when the horde of Greencastle business men, 4-H workers and volunteers arrive tomorrow all materials will be available for construction. Nail driving is expected to start at noon Wednesday. It is hoped that sawdust can be spread on the floor by sundown.

Concrete for the pillars of the L shaped building, 190 feet long and 30 feet wide, was poured today.

Many will be interested in watching the operation and see for themselves just what kind of carpenters Greencastle business men will make. R. P. Mullins, Frank Cannon, and Paul F. Boston, building trustees will personally supervise the tremendous task of directing the expected 100 builders participating in the erection. Coca-Cola, provided by Gardner Brothers and sandwiches made by 4-H girls will be served. Those feeling the over-exertion of their labors can knock-off for a time and enjoy watermelons donated by the Kiwanis Club.

Other improvements in the park are taking form. The roads are being widened preliminary to black-topping. Foundation excavation for the new shelter house under construction just west of the ball diamond is nearing completion. Workmen expect to pour concrete for this structure within a short time.

Government Starts Purchase Of Cattle

FARMERS SHORT OF FOOD OR FUNDS ARE FORCED TO DIS-POSE OF SURPLUS STOCK

CHICAGO, Aug. 3 (UP)—Federal buying of cattle, delayed for weeks, began today as the Chicago market received 27,000 head of cattle, highest figure in three years, mostly from farmers unable to contend with rock-bottom feed prices and drought-burned grazing areas.

The rush of cattle to market apparently spurred the government to activity. M. T. Morgan, AAA commodity purchaser, announced buying had been ordered on the Chicago, Omaha, Sioux City, St. Paul and Fargo markets, with purchases to run between 4,000 and 4,500 head.

A committee of agriculture experts and cattle men meeting at Chicago offered five suggestions to conserve depleted feed supplies in drought areas. They were:

1. That the government impound seed corn by direct purchase for subsequent resale to the farmer or by direct cash loans.
2. That if drought continues feeder pigs be moved to areas with surplus feed. (Conditions particularly acute in southwestern Iowa).
3. That grasshopper poison be provided to protect fall and winter feed.
4. That Resettlement Administration grants be extended to include winter feeding, thus ending present "hand to mouth" existence.
5. That resettlement assistance be extended to all needy farmers, instead of being confined to emergency areas.

LOUDSPEAKER AT SOFT BALL
PARK HEARD OVER THE CITY

Complaints are being made against the loud speaking system in use at the soft ball park. It is loud enough to be heard in practically any part of the city and because of its volume, complaints are reported to city and park officials, and unless the volume is lowered to such an extent that it will not be heard only at the park, the council will be asked to take some action on it.

It is believed the volume of the speaking instrument could be reduced to such a point where patrons of the park could hear it and those away from the park would not be bothered. Softball officials today agreed that the speaking system was too loud and promised to reduce it to a point where it would not bother any one or eliminate it entirely except for occasional announcements.

Best Rain Fell
Since June 2

The rainfall at noon today as well as one last night were the best that Greencastle has had since June 2. When the last rainfall worthwhile came to the city.

The rain last night, with today's storm, brought down about three fourths of an inch of water, which the parched ground soaked up rapidly. It will do the corn crop thousands of dollars worth of good if it was general and along with the corn, will come a few other crops that are still alive, but badly burned as a result of the long drought.

State Welfare
Board Meeting

SCANS BUDGETS OF ALL COUN-TIES RELATIVE TO RELIEF
EXPENSES FOR YEAR

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 4—Delaying action scheduled yesterday the State Welfare Board met here today to scrutinize budgets filed with it by all the ninety-two counties of the state, providing for their participation in the new social security program.

The Welfare Board has the authority to revise upward or downward or affirm the welfare budgets, which in many cases will mean increases in the local property tax rates.

Wayne Coy, acting state administrator, said he could not estimate the probable increases or decreases the board will make in the budgets as they are before the boards, but said he believes the total security costs to the counties will be approximately $3,000,000.

This board has absolute power to control all budgets of the counties on welfare expenses. They can raise or lower the amounts fixed in the budgets, thus the action of this board will be an important one for every county in the state. On their action depends to some extent, the amount of taxes to be levied next month by the county councils.

Choir Singer Dies
For Wife's Murder

BOSTON, Aug. 4, (UP)—Newell Paige Sherman, former choir singer and scoutmaster, was electrocuted today for murdering his young wife for the love of a 17-year-old girl.

The girl, Esther Magill, who said at his trial that she never intended marrying him, worked regular hours at a factory yesterday and spent the evening at the home of an aunt in Worcester.

She did not sign a petition for clemency that 51 others of the factory workers sent Gov. James M. Curley. The governor refused clemency and Sherman's lawyers exhausted their last resource last night in a futile appeal to Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the supreme court on constitutional grounds.

Sherman entered the execution chamber at 12:02 a. m. One minute later Executioner Robert Elliott, pulled his switch. At 12:09 two guards lifted Sherman's 240 pound bulk from the chair and carried it out.

He went to death with no comment upon his crime. At his trial he repudiated a confession in which he had said that on a night a year ago he intentionally overturned a canoe on Lake Singletary, pushed and trampled his much smaller wife under water, and left her to drown while he swam to shore and reported an "accident."

INJURIES TO
PROVE FATAL

ARDELLA HARMAN INJURED AT CORNER OF LIBERTY AND
JACKSON STREETS

DARTED INTO PATH OF CAR

Machine Was Driven By C. C. Tucker
Jr. Who Was Driving At Moderate Speed.

Ardelta Harman, age nine, daughter of Earl Harman was fatally injured when struck by an automobile driven by C. C. Tucker, Jr., of Greencastle, at the corner of Jackson and Liberty streets about 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. The child suffered a fractured skull when thrown into the curb or a water hydrant at the corner.

Immediately after the accident the little girl was taken to the Putnam county hospital where she remained in a critical condition throughout the night. She died at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, after remaining in an unconscious condition from the time of the accident.

Tucker told Lawrence Graham, chief of police, that he was driving north on Jackson with Robert Wallace in the car, and as he approached the intersection with Liberty street, he slowed down. He said he noticed a group of children on the northeast corner of the intersection but as none started to cross Jackson he went on. Tucker stated that before he had a chance to apply the brakes the Harman girl darted directly in front of his car. He had time to swerve slightly to the left and the right fender of the automobile caught the little girl, throwing her to the curb. Stopping his car in a few feet, the boys went quickly to the injured child who was lifted into the car and driven to the county hospital.

Freda Neal, daughter of Herschel Neal, was one of the group with the Harman girl on the street corner and said that the victim had been talking to them for a few minutes, and was just about to leave when one of the group cautioned her about crossing the street. Ardelta said goodbye to her friends, hopped backwards off the curb into Jackson street, turned and ran directly in front of the approaching auto. She was hurled headlong into the curbing. A water plug was at the corner and the child either hit the curb or the water plug, fracturing her skull.

Witnesses to the accident substantiated Tucker's statement that he was driving at a moderate speed and that the child darted directly into his path.

Heiress Held In Death Of Husband

PASADENA, Cal., Aug. 4, (UP)—Mrs. Katrina Bradford, 27, socialite heiress to two great fortunes, was held by police early today after her husband, John Bradford, was found dead in their apartment.

Mrs. Bradford said her husband had been drinking heavily for many months. She awoke yesterday to find his body on the floor and screamed until neighbors were attracted, she told officers. Bradford died from acute alcoholism and had been dead for about 14 hours, physicians reported. An autopsy was scheduled today.

Mrs. Bradford said she is the daughter of the late Fleming Van Rensselaer of Los Angeles, who was the oldest daughter of Mrs. Anna Harrison Van Rensselaer, sister of the railroad magnate.

Trappers Lose To Fur Farms

JUNEAU, Alaska (UP)—Alaska has developed a new industry, one which threatens to halt means of earning a living for hardy trappers of the north.

The spread of fur-farming in the territory has forced many grizzled veterans to give up trapping. Many have spent 30 years or more in the wilds back of Eagle, Circle and other interior villages, coming out only rarely to buy supplies.

Lorin T. Oldroyd, director of the University of Alaska extension division, said fur farming is now one of the fastest growing activities in the north and results obtained by raising fox, mink and other animals far surpass yield of trappers.

"This selection of proper breeders and more regular feeding is resulting in better pelts than the trappers can ever hope to get," Oldroyd said. "Production of finer pelts is boosting cost of furs, to the betterment of the industry."

Oldroyd predicted that within a few years fur-farmers will stabilize the Alaska fur industry to such an extent the trapping season will have slight effect on it.

Fur farms are rapidly springing up throughout Southeastern Alaska, while for islands in the Aleutian Islands have been leased by the Alaska Game Commission for years to raisers of domestic fur.

FARMERS PILE UP PROFITS IN EAST VIRGINIA

NORFOLK, Va. (UP)—The depression is over, as far as farmers in the Virginia Tidewater area are concerned.

The crop of potatoes and tomatoes is the largest in years, and at current high prices is pouring millions of dollars into the pockets of Eastern Virginia farmers.

Potatoes are selling at from $4 to $9 a barrel, and farmers with large acreage are reaping a golden harvest. Many farms have produced 2,000 to 4,000 barrels.

Tomatoes, too, bring from 40 to 80 cents a small basket.

Not only the farmers are enjoying prosperity, but so are hundreds of workers picking, sorting and wrapping the fruit. They are able to make from $3 to $19 a day. One man packed 424 boxes in one day, and received $19.96. A girl wrapped 345 boxes of tomatoes and her check for the day was $14.16.

AERIAL SQUADS TO AID FOREST FIRE FIGHTERS

FLIERS GET ADDED ADVANTAGE WITH NEW EQUIPMENT AND CHEMICALS

PASADENA, Cal. (UP)—Extensive experiments by the United States forestry service are under way here to develop aerial fighting methods against forest fires.

Government officials express their firm conviction that aviation will solve the problem of millions of dollars worth of both government and privately owned timberlands that are ruined annually through forest fire.

The new forest fire fighting technique that is to be developed not only will include aerial fire fighting units but the use of chemical fire extinguishers instead of water.

In addition to extinguishing chemicals, it is planned that the aerial units will make an extensive use of bombs and explosives to blow up "breaks" in forests over which the fire may not be able to extend.

Koy C. Hedley, assistant national forester, is in charge of the group of officials, aviators and other fire fighters that will undertake the experiments near here in aerial forest fire fighting.

"The forest service is searching diligently," says Hedley, "for new measures to keep forest fires from getting head starts on the fire fighters. Although many developments still are in their experimental stages it is hoped through a foamy chemical mixture to make five gallons of water do the work of 15, and to make a bomb that explodes after it has penetrated the ground throw as much dirt on the fire as a whole crew of fire fighters."

"The chemical mixtures," continues Hedley, "can be used in tank trucks and in back pumps carried by the fire fighters as well as being dropped from planes. Used in the latter way, the method would be a retarding step on a fire to keep it from spreading until fighters could get into line."

"For this purpose, airplanes of the hovering type will be used, and the forest service is giving its fullest cooperation and help to those agencies interested in developing such aircraft."

"Different equipment also is needed on forest service tank trucks for the use of chemical mixtures, and that presents another experimental problem, entailing development of tanks different from those already used by the municipalities for the spraying of chemicals on fires."

"When it comes to a man with a back pump fighting fire with chemicals, it is believed one can of water and a few pounds of chemical powder carried on the fire line by one person can be made to do the work of three men with three cans of water."

Hedley declares that other fire control improvements perfected by the forest service will enable 500 men on a fire to handle twice as much fire line as previously.

With their successful development, Hedley declares that the new aerial technique will be extended over all parts of the United States where extensive forest lands still exist.

Figures in "Hypnotic Birth"

Dr. Kanter and Mrs. Leonard Loomis and baby

The use of hypnosis in bringing women through childbirth so that they are entirely oblivious to pain is hailed in some quarters while in other quarters it is viewed with skepticism. In Columbus, O., Dr. A. H. Kanter disclosed he had delivered a 10½-pound baby girl to Mrs. Leonard Loomis without anesthetic and apparently without pain through the use of hypnosis. Dr. Kanter, shown inset with the mother and baby girl, above, predicted that "hypnotic births" may become general.

STATES URGED TO TRY DANISH FARM SYSTEM

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM CALLED SMALL TRACTS TILLED BY ONE FAMILY

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP) — The long established Danish system of small land holdings may yet become the final solution in the United States for the unsuccessful farmer, the agricultural worker, and the 10,000,000 unemployed, according to Eric H. Thomsen, assistant regional director for California, Nevada, Utah and Arizona, of the resettlement administration.

Under the Danish system, individuals, or families, are aided by the government in becoming owners of 20-acre tracts of land on which they eventually become self-sustaining.

In addition to the necessity in the United States of finding a solution for unemployment, for farmers who no longer can succeed, and for migratory farm workers, Thomsen points out that the small-holdings system is being regarded by thousands of experts as the only solution for agriculture in America.

According to this theory, hundreds of thousands of farmers have become convinced that agriculture can only succeed in the United States when the average farmer undertakes production merely on a scale where he can operate his farm himself or with the members of his own family.

Thomsen has begun an active campaign in the four western states where he represents the resettlement administration for adoption of a modified form of the Danish small-holdings land system.

As regards California alone, there are two aspects of the present economic situation which he declares the small-holdings ownership system would solve. The first is the problem of the 200,000 migratory farm workers who come to California at certain times each year for the temporary employment offered in the harvesting of seasonal crops.

According to statistics gathered by Thomsen, the great majority of these migratory farm workers are family men and they continue the season of gaining a precarious living because it is the only one that is open to them. The great majority, he insists, would ask nothing better than government aid which would enable them to buy a small farm, for themselves, on which they could become self-supporting and eventually pay back to the government the money advanced for the purchase of the 20 or more acres comprising the holding.

With the elimination of this class of migratory farm workers, not only in California but in many other agricultural states, Thomsen believes the system would end the present custom of importing large numbers of alien Mexicans into the United States.

Thomsen is convinced that the present federal program for the handling of migratory farm workers never will produce permanent results. It consists largely of the maintenance of camps where they can be taken care of properly during working periods and for their transportation to different parts of the country as the seasonal demands of agriculture may exist.

It is only through the small-holding system, however, he affirms that a permanent solution can be found that will enable these migratory workers to establish small farms and homes of their own, rear their children under American educational advantages, insure proper medical attention, and develop stable community life.

Thomsen declares statistics for the past 35 years have demonstrated that the Danish small-holding system, which is possible only through government aid, constitutes the probably ideal one for America.

At the time Danish small-holdings system was inaugurated, Thomsen admits, it was not regarded as being entirely an untried blessing. It was feared it would merely enable the hired man and the dairy maid to get married, increase the population of Denmark, diminish the number of agricultural workers, and in the end result in the small holding owners becoming public charges on the supposition that they could never become self-supporting on such small portions of soil.

However, the contrary proved to be the case, and in 1909 an "Act Concerning Acquisition of Land for Agricultural Workers" was passed in Denmark, which had for its specific purpose creation of independent small landholdings large enough to become economically self-supporting.

The number of these holdings in Denmark now runs into the hundreds of thousands. While there the 20-acre tract has been considered the ideal one for local conditions, a larger tract, Thomsen admits, might be more desirable for the United States.

One of the most significant indications of the economic soundness and justification of the Danish home-lands, Thomsen says, is the evidence of their adequacy to provide profitable employment for an ever growing number of people.

The same, or a similar, system in the United States could be made the basis not only a solution for the agricultural system, but for many of the 10,000,000 now unemployed, he believes.

NOTED RECTOR DISPUTES IDEA OF EVOLUTION

MONTREAL, (UP) — The theory of evolution has denounced as a "vile conspiracy to rob the world of its faith in God" by Rev. Dr. D. E. Hart-Davies, noted Scottish rector, in a lecture here.

Dr. Hart-Davies, who is rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Edinburgh, declared that Pithecanthropus was only created out of the crown of a skull and bones that night easily have belonged to another creature altogether.

"It is a rotten philosophical theory without any real foundation," he said. "No scientist dare attempt to demonstrate evolution by actual experiment."

"If there were any truth in that theory the world would be full of creatures one-fifth man and four-fifths chimpanzee."

CHAPTER V

FIELDS had gone to a small town and wanted a drink. In his customary voice—he likes to talk loudly—he asked the hotel clerk where he could get one. The alarmed clerk hushed him and finally whispered that if Charley Bogle could be found the drink would be forthcoming.

"Then find Bogle," ordered Fields but discovered that he would have to follow the clerk. Then began a mysterious round. Into various cigar stores, pool halls and other small establishments went the clerk and Fields. At each place a whispered consultation was held with one or

In payment for his "snort" he stayed in the newspaper office for an hour regaling the delighted reporters with stories of his travels.

Fields had innumerable experiences in his voyages over the world. While he was appearing in Cape Town, South Africa, in vaudeville, a "rodeo"—at least Americans would call it a rodeo—was being staged at the same time. Fields dropped over to watch the fun and became interested in a young American cowboy who had shepherded a cargo of cattle from South America to South Africa. Years later Fields and this same cowboy were destined to work in the "Follies" together and become great friends. The cowboy was the late Will Rogers. Fields headlined several bills at the Follies Bergere in Paris. Because his entire finally made Fields understand that he wanted an autographed picture rather than money. His applause had been in earnest.

Later in Hollywood Fields attended a party. Another guest came up to him, solemnly produced three tennis balls and proceeded to do part of Fields' old juggling routine. He is a star in his own right now, Carl Brisson, who had wanted an autographed picture but no money as a young boy.

Fields headlined the Palladium in London many times. He was invariably received well by the critics. But one of them almost ruined Fields' career. He commented, in print, that it was a pity that Hazlitt, who had written of the jugglers from India, was not alive to see Fields, the greatest juggler of his day.

Fields never had run across any Hazlitt in his extensive reading and he proceeded to make up the deficiency. He got everything by Hazlitt that he could lay his hands on and eagerly read pages and pages. Eventually he found the essay on jugglers and read it avidly. Hazlitt commented at great length on the mathematical precision, the co-ordination of eye, nerve and muscle, the nimbleness and dexterity of the jugglers.

At this greatly impressed Fields. He knew that juggling was a painstaking work, that he had put years of work into perfecting himself, and that he must constantly keep in practice, but, until he read this article, he didn't actually realize what he had been doing all those years.

Back on the stage again, doing his routine, he started consciously to co-ordinate. He tried to make his eye, muscles and mind do the same thing at the same time. As a result, he couldn't do a single trick right. The harder he worked, the worse he got. It went on for several days. Finally Fields ripped the offending article out of the book, threw it in a fire and savagely watched it burn up.

This done he heaved a sigh of relief, put all thoughts of co-ordination out of mind, went to work and did his tricks perfectly.

persons. After two hours the mysterious Charley Bogle was found and he, with a furtive air, managed to give Bill one small sip of vitriolic white mule.

On another occasion, Fields had gone to a new town to see the preview of one of his early pictures. Apparently he didn't think much of it because, once it was over, he asked where he could find a drink. Everyone assured him no drinks were available.

"What?" roared Fields. "No drinks? You guys live here and don't know where to get a drink. I've never been here before and I'll have one in five minutes. Come with me!"

He led the parade down the main street until he found the office of the morning newspaper. He went in and asked the way to the sports department.

"My good man," he said. "My name is Fields—W. C. Fields. Maybe you've heard of me."

The sports reporter assured Fields he not only had heard of him but had seen him many times.

"Then," said Fields, "if you would like to do me a favor, pour me a drink."

A bottle was instantly produced from the reporter's desk.

"You see," said Fields to those with him, "just a bit of ingenuity and the thing is done."

act was in pantomime, audiences everywhere could appreciate his work. On one of the programs there was another comedian who employed a "stooge" to sit in a box and shoot pellets at him. The "stooge" later became the best known comedian—and pantomimist—in the world. He was Charlie Chaplin.

On another Follies Bergere program a young song-and-dance man was in the opening spot. He showed great promise—a promise which later made him internationally famous as an entertainer. He was Maurice Chevalier.

In Copenhagen, as he had done in other cities, Fields hired a clique of small boys. He wanted to be sure of some applause. After the performance one of the youngsters refused pay. Largely by gestures, he

PRESS TELEGRAPHER LOOKS BACK ON VIVID MEMORIES

NEW YORK. (UP)—The old-time press telegrapher is disappearing and in this day of the automatic printing machine he often sits along the sidelines, ready for any emergency.

There are comparatively few veteran "Morse men" working wires now and still fewer of those veterans whose memories are rich with world-stirring events that have been studied in school books for nearly half a century. One of the members of the vanishing clan is Francis A. Gribbon, Western Union manager at the United Press general offices in New York. His service spans the regimes of six United Press presidents and six Western Union presidents.

Gribbon was hired as a Western Union messenger July 1, 1888, at the historic old statehouse in Boston. The job was to be during a summer vacation, but it has continued through 48 years.

"My first press assignment," Gribbon recalled today, "came after I had been on the job four days when, resplendent in a new blue uniform, brass buttons, blue trimmings, I was detailed to a woman correspondent who was covering the G. A. R. convention which was attended by President Benjamin F. Harrison that year."

In those days telegraph companies did not have the elaborate wire layouts they have now. The telephone had just emerged from its experimental stage and was being introduced into business slowly and cautiously.

"The cumbersome telephone equipment," Gribbon said, "was mounted on a board about three feet long. At the bottom was a box holding batteries. The crank at the side was regarded as a curiosity."

"I broke my shell," Gribbon reminisced, "as a full-fledged 'ham' operator in 1892 and my first job was to give the relief operator a holiday on the first Columbus Day, Oct. 12, 1892, in my home town of East Boston. I well remember my pals watching me through a large window, some with admiration, and some otherwise."

"In 1895 I started on my journey-manship, traveling from place to place, which in those days the majority of operators did. I had great ideas regarding fast communication service. At first I thought I could improve many things, but gradually during 48 years of service I have come to the conclusion that those who were in charge at that time and even down to the present knew their job pretty well."

"During my travels I just missed being a member of the crew of the filibustering schooner Competitor, which had been running contraband of war out of Key West, Fla., to remote points along the Cuban coast."

Later the Competitor's exploits became subject of an international controversy between the United States and Spain and were among the contributory causes of the Spanish-American war.

Continuing his story Gribbon told of returning to Boston in 1896.

"My first big job," he said, "was covering the Spanish-American war at the Boston Globe. Then followed the Boer war, then keeping the 'death watch' on Queen Victoria at the Boston Herald."

He recalled the assassination of President William McKinley at Buffalo.

"I worked an overflow press wire running up through Vermont for 48 hours at that time," Gribbon said.

"Coming down through the years," he related, "there was the announcement by Dr. Frederick A. Cook of his discovery of the North Pole, followed a couple of months later by Admiral Robert E. Peary's disclosure that Cook had handed the world a 'gold brick.'"

"Then came the Republic-Florida teamship collision with Jack Binns, the Republic's radio operator sending out the 'CDQ' for assistance. This marked the first instance of the radio's application as a vital adjunct to safety of life at sea."

The Titanic disaster followed. More or less routine news for a few years until—

"On a dull morning in the summer of 1914 about 8:30 a. m. a 'flash' of the assassination of the Austrian Archduke of Sarajevo."

The world war. Events followed quickly, the invasion of Belgium. Great Britain's ultimatum, the world war was on.

"The United Press cable volume," Gribbon said, "became tremendous. It jumped overnight by thousands of words."

"But after a year the war resolved itself into more or less of a routine, especially during the winter period when the armies dug in. We would start the war in the morning and close it up at night, to be reopened the next day."

Gribbon remembers vividly one of the outstanding news stories of the war—the Battle of Jutland. At the beginning of the war Britain cut the German cable between the Azores and Emden, thus depriving the Germans of transatlantic cable communication, but they developed an adequate distributing medium for their news through wireless from Nauzen, Germany, to Sayville, N. Y. They made good use of it, too, he recalls.

"German war propaganda flowed over it virtually all the time. Most of this," Gribbon explained, "we let go to the 'wind,' or in other words we did not copy it."

"Then one day with the usual German thoroughness of detail, a story came across describing displacements, gun mounts and crew complements of various German warships. After sending three or four hundred words, a sentence was injected saying that a German warship had engaged British warships, and one of the greatest stories of the war began to break."

And after 48 years Gribbon still is on the job every day.

LONDON MARKS 60 MILLION FOR IMPROVED PORT

LONDON. (UP)—London's great trade gateway—the Port of London—is to be developed and improved at a cost of $60,000,000. The work will be carried out within as short a time as financial considerations permit.

The Port of London Authority has decided on this huge program of renovation and construction so that the port will be able to meet the anticipated expansion in world trade.

In 1909, for instance, the year in which the port authority was created,

Modern Circus Mourns Golden Age of Barnum

Recent suit brought by the government against Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Combined Shows, Inc., has focused attention on the earnings and financial structure of the modern circus. Although receipts of this huge circus combine have totaled approximately $50,000,000 for the period from 1918 to 1932, net earnings on the sizeable investment have been less than $500,000 a year. The "golden age" of P. T. Barnum, master showman who preceded John Ringling and his six brothers, has apparently passed. Radio, the movies and other forms of entertainment have provided keen competition for the sawdust ring in the past decade.

Early prospect of transatlantic airplane service marks one more advance in the rapid progress made in commercial aviation in the past two years. Airlines in United States have been at the top in developing speedier and more commodious ships, establishing service to new areas, and perfecting safety devices to eliminate accidents. Since the Wright brothers made their historic flight, aviation has marched on with increasing rapidity. Especially has this been true since the first mail service was established approximately 10 years ago. Newest of the super-airliners carries more than 20 passengers and is built with sleeping accommodations for night flying.
